Athletes to get cash grants

By Graham Dunbar
ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAUSANNE, Switzerland — It's not Olympic prize money officially, but it is a significant amount of cash going directly to athletes after a Summer or Winter Games.

The International Olympic Committee pledged Wednesday to pay up to $140 million to athletes through the 2028 Los Angeles Summer Games by creating a fund for $10,000 grants for which they can apply after competing.

The IOC's cash commitment came after growing calls were strongly resisted in recent years to pay prize money at the Olympics, and signaled another policy shift under its president Kirsty Coventry.

IOC member and former NBA star Pau Gasol announced the project that will first be open to nearly 2,900 athletes who competed at the 2026 Milan Cortina Winter Games.

Around 11,000 athletes due to compete in 2028 at L.A. also can apply for grants totaling about $100 million after those Olympics, if they meet integrity criteria such as not testing positive for doping.

"This is a win for all of us," said Gasol, who represents athletes on the 15-member IOC executive board, adding that it was "not prize money."

The money allocated by the IOC is not dependent on an athlete continuing their career.

Coventry's strategy

The cash promise was the signature issue of an IOC meeting setting a future strategy under its president Kirsty Coventry exactly one year after she formally took office.

Gasol said the IOC had heard a consistent message during its strategy review: "Athletes want more direct support throughout their Olympic journey and beyond."

The 42-year-old Coventry is a five-time Olympian and two-time swimming gold medalist for Zimbabwe. She was elected as the youngest president, and most recent former athlete, in the IOC's modern history.

Prize money

Paying prize money to Olympic medalists was a central policy for one of Coventry's election opponents, World Athletics leader Sebastian Coe, who oversaw rewarding track and field champions at the 2024 Paris Olympics with $50,000.

"This is a historic moment for the movement and I'm absolutely delighted to be in the room when this has been announced," Coe told his fellow IOC members, praising Coventry's policy.

In Los Angeles, World Athletics is adding to its prize fund to pay silver and bronze medalists as well.

Coventry restated two weeks ago her long-held belief that the IOC should not use its Olympic revenues to pay prize money to an elite tier of medalists.

That question to Coventry at an IOC news conference followed a fierce reaction by some athletes to her comments while on Olympic business in New Zealand last month that prize money would not be paid.

"The backlash was a little frustrating," Coventry acknowledged Wednesday at a news conference, because the policy plan had still been confidential. "It is not something that just happened over the last few weeks."

Public Notice

Q&A

What is a public notice?

It's information about important government activities. Notice in the newspaper is required for a good reason — to make sure it's NOTICED. It's crucial to government transparency...and government accountability.

Your local paper is the most visible, independent source for this crucial service. We not only print notices in the paper, but post them on our website and a statewide website at no extra charge. And they're archived forever, so there's a permanent and unalterable record.

Texas newspapers have published public notices since 1836. As your hometown paper, we're proud to provide this service to our communities.

What makes newspapers the best source for public notice?

Newspapers are independent, credible, and can guarantee readership. Newspaper readers pay attention to what's going on in the community.

Newspapers are read both in print and online. So are the public notices we publish. And after they're published, we archive them. Forever.

Since 1836, Texans have relied on their newspapers to provide public notices. They still do...for lots of good reasons.

Who benefits from public notice?

You do. Public notices are required because a government body or corporation wants to do something you need to know about.

Heavyweight division enters a new era

By Steve Douglas
ASSOCIATED PRESS

Heavyweight boxing is entering a new era after Oleksandr Usyk's decided to stand down as unified champion and sent his belts to different parts of the world.

That's given a bunch of globally unheralded fighters the chance to emerge from the shadows in the sport's glamor division.

Usyk recently vacated his WBA, IBF and WBC heavyweight world titles "ahead of stepping into the ring for my final fight" — without saying who that "last dance," as he put it, would be against.

"I want to make them available," the unbeaten Ukrainian said of his belts, "so the guys who are next in line can fight for them." So, who are they?

Here's a look at where the belts are headed in a division that has been blown wide open as Usyk — the dominant heavyweight force for the last five years — takes a new direction and established stars like Anthony Joshua and Tyson Fury are seemingly in the twilight of their careers.

New WBC champion

Agit Kabayel didn't even have to fight to become world champion.

The 33-year-old German was recognized as the new WBC champion last weekend, his ascension capping a steady rise in his 15-year undefeated professional career.

Over the past few years Kabayel has collected various regional heavyweight titles — European, Continental Americas, Mediterranean — amid a run of 27 straight wins. Now he has been gifted the big one before fight No. 28.

He had been the interim WBC champ since February 2025, when he knocked out Zhilei Zhang.

Kabayel, born in Leverkusen to Kurdish parents, is the first German heavyweight champion since Max Schmeling in 1932 and says he'll "fight with everyone."

Gassiev upgraded?

The WBA has yet to officially comment since Usyk's announcement.

If it follows the WBC's lead, then the upgraded champion would be Murat Gassiev, a 32-year-old Russian who has been serving as 'regular' champion for the past year while Usyk has been labelled the 'super' champion.

Gassiev, who Usyk beat in 2018 to unify the cruiserweight division, jumped up to heavyweight in 2020 — soon after Usyk did the same — and has won seven of his eight fights, losing only to Otto Wallin.

Like Kabayel, he has yet to fight a standout name as a heavyweight. He was, though, a star of the cruiserweight division as a two-belt champion before falling to Usyk by a unanimous decision.

Gassiev knocked out Kubrat Pulev in December for his biggest heavyweight win to date and will seek a 34th pro victory when he takes on Tony Yoka of France in Moscow on July 11.

Itauma vs. Sanchez

On Tuesday, the IBF wished Usyk "continued success in the pursuit of his future endeavors" and ordered its No. 1-ranked contender, Frank Sanchez of Cuba, to negotiate with Britain's Moses Itauma for a championship fight.

They have until July 29 to reach an agreement, the IBF said.

Itauma, a 21-year-old southpaw regarded as a future star of British boxing, is slated to fight Filip Hrgovic of Croatia in London on Aug. 29 in London after turning heads in March with his brutal knockout of Jermaine Franklin Jr.

The 33-year-old Sanchez, who has won 26 of his 28 pro fights, has fought only once since February 2025 — a second-round knockout of Richard Torrez Jr. on the Usyk-Verhoeven undercard.

Usyk: 'not the end'

Usyk is coming off a victory over Dutch kickboxer Rico Verhoeven in a fight in Egypt that signaled the unified champion's career might be veering off in another direction.

Where, though? "This is a well-considered decision that I am confident will open new opportunities for me," said Usyk, who has been proud to represent the country of Ukraine during the four years since Russia launched its all-out invasion of its neighbor.

"This is not the end of the story. The continuation lies ahead."

Usyk hasn't lost any of his 25 professional fights across the cruiserweight and heavyweight divisions.

He has been an undisputed champion in both — twice as a heavyweight, after stepping up to that category in 2019.

Usyk's camp appears to have ruled out completing a trilogy of fights against Fury, with Sergey Lapin, chief executive of Usyk's promotional company Ready To Fight, telling British broadcaster Sky Sports: "I don't really see much point in it. Oleksandr has already beaten Tyson Fury twice."

Fury vs. Joshua

So what of Fury, the former WBC champion who lost to Usyk in back-to-back unification fights in 2024?

The brash Brit has embarked on another comeback, having beaten Arslanbek Makhmudov in April and set up a fight on July 24 against former world heavyweight champion challenger Mariusz Wach in Pattaya, Thailand.

The 37-year-old Fury says that marks "the start of a huge second half of the year for me" — one which is expected to include a long-awaited showdown with Joshua in an all-British, non-title bout.

They have yet to fight each other despite a number of attempts to arrange a money-spinning meeting.

Joshua — a two-time heavyweight champion — also is on the comeback trail after being involved in a car crash in Nigeria in December that killed two of his friends and saw him sustain minor injuries.

The 36-year-old Joshua will fight Kristian Prenska on July 25 in what's also being viewed as a tune-up ahead of a match with Fury.

Francois Nel/Getty Images

Murat Gassiev, who will fight Tony Yoka on July 11 in hopes of securing his 34th pro victory, will likely be upgraded to the WBA heavyweight champion slot.
